

BIRTH

By Nnamdi Michael Okpala

1G5 0EQ

OBINexus Business

In search for a definition of consciousness

We have a model of consciousness into a definition

Development of consciousness - BIRTH

This is my experience of Birth,

When I was born I was unconscious. It was pitch black, I was experiencing waves of knowledge. These waves, what I believe were brain waves, were moving about in the darkness and I was just observing.

It started from 2d darkness to 3d darkness when I opened my eyes.

These brain wave of knowledge was very all knowledge and understanding . I felt them and could not interact with them for now. This were waves such as the Einstein theory of relativity. Quantum Mechanical principle the chicken and egg problem dilemma . I did not really understand why till later.

When my consciousness was forming I began to lose access to this database of knowledge. This database was i top fen this wave and their was a barrier of protection which stopped my from accessing them.

Half way through WHEN my consciousness was half developed I could access the field and search for things in the field any knowledge and understand I wanted.

When I wake up , ad was born my consciousness formed and the brain wave stoped coming the information field was unavailable. I experience colour and started differentiating the things I could have stopped observed when the field was intractable when my consciousness half developed

This is hard fro being unconscious the problem is that i didn't understand d what th kwoldeg adnunderstanignds was impormntat and i could have just copied everything into my consicone ss.

That is my brain The n I had to learn it al for school. When if no one believe me I DONT CARE.